Dr. Stewart obtained his MD from Queen's University and completed surgical training in Urology at the University of Toronto. He did fellowship training in oncology at Harvard University, and was appointed to the academic staff at the University of Toronto in 1997. His clinical interests include renal transplantation and urologic oncology, and he practices at St. Michael's Hospital. He is currently developing curriculum for undergraduate and postgraduate medical trainees on the topic of the physician as a patient, supported by the Waugh Family Foundation, as a professorship in Medical Humanities.
